Setayesh Modanloo
MS Department of Psychiatry, University of Alberta

Seta Modanloo is a psychologist working in the computational psychiatry group at the University of Alberta focussing on evaluation of innovative methods to support a range of vulnerable populations, including remote camp workers at Fly-in / Fly-out work sites. The research conducted in this area includes mixed-methods approaches to assessing needs and responses of workers during the COVID-19 pandemic and of developing general support systems for monitoring mental health and physical health through streaming data applications with smart device technology.